Octopuses? We Know
Them
Gagging Karolyi
Immortal Audiences
Al Smith and Wadsworth
—By Arthur Brisbane—

DA TARBELL is writing another book to attack the Standard Oil of Indiana. Too late for that; we are used to "octopuses," and we don't mind them.

When the old Standard Oil was said to be worth a thousand millions everybody shivered and some cried "horro." Now one little branch of the old Standard Oil in Indiana is worth in its new combination more than five hundred millions, and it is not the biggest Standard Oil unit.

THE COUNTRY no longer asks: "How much money have you?" but rather, "What do you do with the money you have?"

The Rockefeller on the whole appear to be doing pretty well, with their foundations, their fight against disease, all the way from Paris to Peking and from Peking to Rome. Also in Central America, and all over the globe.

The Rockefeller don't squander their money, don't set a bad example, don't take scores of men away from useful work to wait on them. It doesn't make much difference how much they have if it pays taxes, and doesn't corrupt the government.

COUNT KAROLYI now in America, was before the war one of the richest men in Hungary, worth perhaps thirty millions.

He was the first President of the Hungarian Republic. His estate fortune was confiscated. He came to this country to join his wife, granddaughter of the great Hungarian statesman, Andrássy, Prime Minister of Hungary fifty-eight years ago.

In a few days Count Karolyi leaves for England, where he will speak in public concerning affairs of his own country and other countries. Great Britain, which is a democracy, will be expected to learn that while in the United States Karolyi was forbidden, by the government, to make public speeches.

Why are foreigners? Heaven knows. Somebody over here who still has forty millions probably didn't want him to talk.

In England, where they have brains and a democracy, they are not afraid of free speech.

NEWSPAPERS in New York are filled with groaning about immoral plays.

The thing to worry about is not the immoral play, but the immoral audience.

POLITICS in New York State may interest the whole country. Wadsworth, whose term soon ends, may fight Governor Al Smith for his seat in the Senate.

Governor Smith will be fighting not for a mere Senate seat, but to make himself the "logical" Democratic candidate for President in 1928.

If Senator Wadsworth wants an interesting fight, he had better beat Smith in New York.

NOTED CITIZENS ask President Coolidge to outlaw war.

How would you go about outlawing war? How would you keep Austria from declaring war on Serbia, following the murder of an Austrian heir to the throne?

How would you keep Germany from declaring war on France NOW, if she had the money, weapons and living machines?

How would you keep Japan from declaring war on the United States, if Japan thought it her duty to chance our minds about Asiatic imperialism?

YOU CAN'T outlaw war, but you can do much to prevent it. The way to prevent war is to be ready for it—have thousands first-class flying machines, with good pilots, half of them with pursuit planes, the other half heavy bombing planes, would do more for peace than all Continued on Page 4, Column 5.

PALS OF CHAPMAN ACCUSED OF SETTING $200,000 SPITE FIRE

Steubenville, O., April 7.—That the Stanton Motor Company garage fire here today, which resulted in the destruction of the building and thirty automobiles, with an estimated loss of $200,000, was started by former associates of Gerald Chapman, bandit, is the belief of the police.

The garage is owned by William Snyder and Miss Katherine Bounie, witnesses against Chapman at his trial. It is believed the garage was fired in an act of revenge.

New Haven, Ct., April 7.—The students at Yale make no issue about criticizing the Chapman verdict. The Yale News, in its leading editorial, says today:

CHURCH 'REFUSES' $500,000 BEQUEST

Los Angeles, April 7.—The parently paradoxical case of a church attempting to set aside a will bequeathing it the bulk of a $500,000 estate was revealed today when The First Church of Christ, Scientist, of Boston, petitioned the Superior Court to set aside the will made by Georgia Sackett Huggins 26 days before her death last June and naming it the principal beneficiary.

The action was prompted by an old California law providing that bequests to charitable or religious organizations shall not be valid unless the will incorporating them was executed at least thirty days before the death of the testator. According to the church, which says that the 26-day will, which has been admitted in probate and which provides that all previous wills shall be void, be set aside and a previous will recognized as valid. The previous will also names the church chief beneficiary, but provides for a different set of personal bequests.

450 TARS LEAVE NEWPORT TO JOIN PACIFIC FLEET

Newport, R. I., April 7.—This city had a reminder of war today when 450 sailors of the United States Navy paraded through the city and en route for San Francisco. A special train of sixteen cars will make a non-stop run to enable them to join the fleet maneuvers in the Pacific. In the command were 29 men from the Newport training station, while the remainder were from the New London submarine base and the Portsmouth Navy Yard. Lieutenant Peter Evers commanded the detachment. The train is scheduled in San Francisco April 15.

REP. ROGERS' WIDOW TO RUN FOR HOUSE

Lowell, April 7.—Mrs. Edith Rogers, widow of Congressman John Rogers, announced today that she would become a candidate for election as representative from the Fifth Massachusetts district to succeed her husband.

FINGER PRINTS MAY TELL

Whose hand

Who is the man, or men, responsible for the death of Alexander (Sandy) Buchanan, Canadian World War veteran, whose body was found hidden in the woods near the McLean Hospital in Waverley. This question may be answered by fingerprints on the gas mask which had been pulled over the man's face. Buchanan had first been rugged and hospitalized, and the gas mask, the inside of which had been filled with chloroform, was adjusted to his face.

'LARRY' PATON DIES IN 3-STORY FALL

Lawrence "Larry" Paton, noted expert and connected with the dental staff of the Boston Herald, died as a result of injuries sustained when he accidentally fell from a window of his fourth-floor apartment No. 19 Orkney road, Brighton.

Paton was engaged in hanging drapes in his apartment when he was with the fatal accident. The window, long and wide, was open. "Larry" either slipped while hanging the drapes, or became dizzy and fell through the window to the street.

When a resident of the apartment, Mrs. Paton, saw her husband fall, she rushed to his aid and he was rushed to the St. Elizabeth's Hospital, where it was found that his back was broken, the lungs in his feet were crushed and he was badly cut and bruised about the body.

The injured man never regained consciousness. He died at 6:12 a. m.

The party-busy dinner at the home window, however, did not stop the accident as a result as could have an eye witness, C. A. Santos, who occupies an apartment on the third floor of the house, heard the groans of the injured man as he lay in the courtyard, and went to his assistance, later summoning the ambulance.

BELIEVE BUCHANAN TRAILED BY SLAYERS SEEKING VENGEANCE

Three important developments occurred today in the investigation of the murder of Alexander Buchanan, Canadian war veteran, whose body, with a chloroform-filled gas mask on the face, was found in Waverley Oaks.

First in importance was the statement of John McDonald, of Rockport, cousin of the murdered man, that Buchanan was attacked with chloroform on Christmas Eve, at the time he was reported to have been forced to drink poison.

Second was the declaration, also by McDonald, that the service man had been trading for weeks by at least one case and probably two, and that although Buchanan admitted having something on his mind, he refused to reveal it.

The third event of moment was the discovery by the Boston Evening American that two of the three Canadians seen in Waverley Friday night were at Waverley street and Tremont road, the entrance to the McLean Hospital, at 7 o'clock.

The third stranger, who carried the black overnight case large enough to contain a gas mask, was one with the connections at the time, although in their company a short time before.

DRUGGED ON CHRISTMAS EVE

It was at five o'clock in seven that Buchanan, parted from his sister, Miss Christine Buchanan, at the nurse's home of the hospital, a nurse's throw from White street and Tremont road, and started down the street past his death.

McDonald's statement that Buchanan was chloroformed on Christmas Eve is considered significant in view of the fact that the same drug was used after the gas mask to cause his death.

It is believed that the same man, two in number, who chloroformed the veteran, according to McDonald's story, in his Portland street room, participated in the Waverley killing.

One night, when Sandy was at our house, I asked him about the holiday in his room and what he made of it. He said:

"After returning from your house on Christmas Eve, where you remember I was helping drive the tree, I wrote a letter. It fell into about 100 that night. I went out to post the letter, turned off the light in my room, but left the window open."

SAW MEN AT WINDOW

"I came back through the courtyard and as I entered my room I was startled to see the figures of two men against the window. They were standing in the main and their figures were thrown in relief by the street light through the window."

"The room was dark, and before I could say a word one of them dropped a rag with chloroform on it over my face. That's all I remember. When I woke up hours later I felt deathly sick and found that I had been drugged."

MRS. GROVER TELLS OF STOLEN PAPERS

With "Paul Moore" as Nicholas Wiseman, mystery correspondent in the case, learning yesterday, Mrs. Grover, the widow of the late President, testified today in Salem Court at the resumption of the Grover cross-examination.

Mrs. Grover is suing for separate maintenance from Lyndon V. Grover, the late President's son, who is a factor, while he seeks a divorce and names "Paul Moore" as the "other man."

Mrs. Grover insists he is ready to prove his identity as Vincent Paul, an alias name, was the key to all feminine eyes today, both outside the court and during testimony. He arrived in a snappy manner, in high power and was highly calm.

Although "Moore" sat with friends of Mrs. Grover, his wife sat alone on the other side of the courtroom, listening just as intently.

was stolen, I could not see who the man was in the dark.

Sandy occupied a basement room in the Pembroke street house, McDonald continued, "which was easily accessible without disturbing the other papers, and he generally used the rear door. Apparently that night someone was waiting on him, and when he went out to post the letter side him the room.

"It may have been the same man we saw around our house later. On several occasions during the past five or six weeks we have seen a man lurking around the house.

When Mrs. McDonald told me she had seen a man a couple of times, looking around, and I saw a strange man once or twice. As our house is in the rear there would be no reason for a man to be there unless he were watching someone.

KNOW HE WAS TRAILED.

"Sandy was a frequent visitor to our house, and we believe that he was being trailed. The man who was left when he retired he was observed.

"I asked Sandy about it and he said he thought he was trailed, but he wouldn't go into details. He had something on his mind, but he wouldn't talk about it. That's the kind of chap he was in Boston.

"There are some men in Boston from Sandy's outfit, D Company of the 7th Battalion, and they may know whether or not anyone had a grudge against him. I'm sure the family knew of no trouble that occurred when he was at home and he lived in Boston twelve or fifteen years.

"He was a carpenter by trade, but during the last few years he had been in the market as a meat cutter. I went down there and tried to find the place where he worked. It was either in Faneuil Hall Market or on Southman, tall and thin, ran in and out about.

Market street, or somewhere in that vicinity. There was a report that some man down there had a grudge against him.

"I do know that Sandy always had a great weight on his mind. He was not himself for some months before the murder."

TRIED TO HIDE REAL STORY.

Asked about the conflicting stories of the attack on Christmas Eve, McDonald said he thought Buchanan told them in an effort to keep the reality from his mother.

Edna Wallace of No. 24 Maple street, Waverley, told the Boston Evening American that he saw two of the three Canadians at White street and Trapelo road about 1 o'clock Friday night.

"I went to a ball game on Friday afternoon," said Wallace, "returning between 4 and 4:30 to Waverley square. As I was going into the Waverley square looking alone, I saw the three men coming out. One of them carried a black overcoat over his shoulder. He appeared to act suspiciously and I looked at him more closely than the others.

"He was between twenty-eight and thirty years old, I should say, 170 to 180 pounds in weight, reddish face, smooth shaven, wore a solid gray, dark shabby overcoat and was shabbily dressed. The other two men had top coats on, but looked like countrymen.

"I went home to supper and around 1 o'clock I saw two of the three men at White street and Trapelo road. The third man with the overcoat case was not with them."

WHY GIRLS VANISHED.

Joseph Blahy, an attendant at the McLean Hospital, today denied the report that he found the body of Buchanan. Blahy said he had put up his car in the Pleasant street garage at 4:35 when a rough-dressed man came in and out about 5:30.

Assistant District Attorney Charles Lawrence of Middlesex County, state Detective Edward P. O'Neil and Chief John Argy of the Belmont police, who are conducting the investigation favor the theory that Buchanan was murdered by former service men, largely because of the use of the gas mask found on the body of which chloroform was poured.

Fingerprints on this mask, an old navy issue one sold in stores in Boston, were photographed by Captain C. J. Van Amburg, state expert, and turned over to Renee D. Hill, head of the bureau of identification.

WILL CHECK UP PRINTS.

Copies of the photographs have been forwarded to Washington and Ottawa, Canada, where they will be checked with the finger prints of millions of service men.

Reports from these cities are expected within a day or two and in the meantime the prints are being checked up in the collection kept on file by Mr. Hill at the state house.

Announcement was made today by Mr. and Mrs. Buchanan of a change in the place of funeral of the murdered man. Instead of taking place at the Waterman Chapel, as originally planned, services will be conducted at the West Brookline street church, where the family of the former soldier was a member.

The funeral will take place at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon, the change of location having become necessary because of the large number of friends of Buchanan who have expressed a wish to attend.

It is believed that John Buchanan, a younger brother of the victim, who served with him throughout the war, will be of considerable assistance when he arrives here. The young man is on his way from the State of Washington and is due to reach Boston Friday afternoon.

BAKE SECRET AFFAIRS.

The search is turning to the province of Nova Scotia, where Buchanan was brought up, and from whence many of his friends and acquaintances in this city also come.

The theory is growing stronger each day that a woman will be eventually found to have been at the bottom of the crime. Despite reports of a woman friend to the contrary, it has been learned that "Sandy" Buchanan was acquainted with numerous women.

In this connection the police are probing the disappearance from the McLean Hospital in Waverley of the two student nurses, sisters, on the same night Buchanan was murdered.

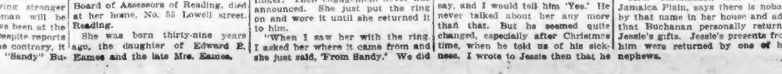

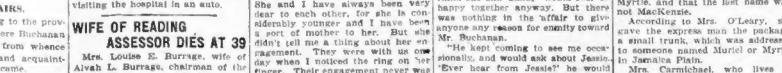

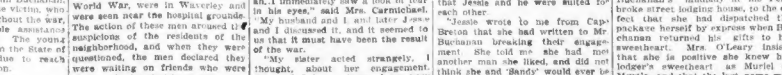

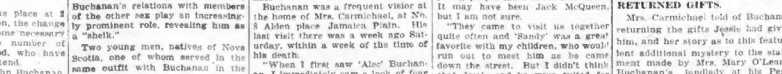

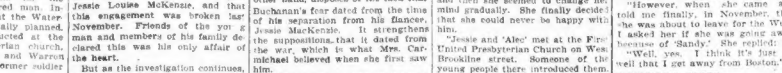

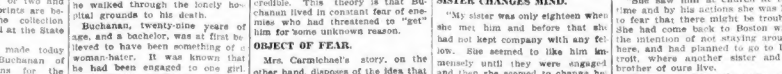

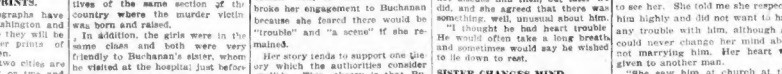

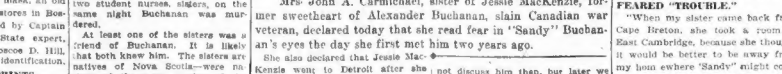

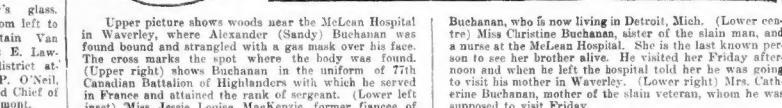

"At least one of the sisters was a friend of Buchanan. It is likely that both knew him. The sisters are natives of Nova Scotia—were natives of the same section of the country where the murder victim was born and raised.

In addition, the girls were in the same class and both were very friendly to Buchanan's sister, when he visited at the hospital just before he was seized through the lonely hospital grounds to his death.

Buchanan, twenty-nine years of age, and a bachelor, was at first believed to have been something of a woman-batter. It was known that he had been engaged to a girl, Jessie Louise McKenzie, and that the engagement was broken last November. Friends of the young man and members of his family declared this was his only affair of the heart.

But as the investigation continues, Buchanan's relations with members of the other sex play an increasingly prominent role, revealing him as a "shell."

Two young men, natives of Nova Scotia, one of whom served in the same outfit with Buchanan in the World War, were in Waverley and were seen near the hospital grounds. The action of these men aroused the suspicions of the residents of the neighborhood, and when they were questioned, the men declared they were waiting on friends who were visiting the hospital in an auto.

Our plan

Buchanan's Fiancée, Afraid of Trouble, Fled Hub, Sister Says

Mrs. John A. Carmichael, sister of Jessie McKenzie, former sweetheart of Alexander Buchanan, slain Canadian war veteran, declared today that she read fear in "Sandy" Buchanan's eyes the day she first met him two years ago.

She also declared that Jessie McKenzie was a great favorite of his, and that she broke her engagement to Buchanan because she feared there would be "trouble" and "a scene" if she remained.

Her story tends to support the theory which the authorities consider credible. This theory is that Buchanan lived in constant fear of enemies who had threatened to "get him" for some unknown reason.

OBJECT OF FEAR.

Mrs. Carmichael's story, on the other hand, disposes of the idea that Buchanan's fear dated from the time of his separation from his fiancée, Jessie McKenzie. It strengthens the suppositions that it dated from the war, which was what Mrs. Carmichael believed when she first saw him.

Buchanan was a frequent visitor at the home of Mrs. Carmichael, at No. 1 Allen place, Jamaica Plain. His last visit there was a week ago Saturday, within a week of the time of his death.

"When I first saw 'Sandy' Buchanan, I immediately saw a look of fear in his eyes," said Mrs. Carmichael. "My husband and I and later Jessie and I discussed it and it seemed to us that it must have been the result of the war."

"My sister acted strangely, I thought, about her engagement. She and I have always been very dear to each other, for she is considerably younger and I have been a sort of mother to her. But she didn't tell me a thing about her engagement. They were with us one day when I noticed the ring on her finger. Their engagement never was announced. She just put the ring on and wore it until she returned it to me."

"When I saw her with the ring I asked her where it came from and she just said, 'From Sandy.' We did had changed so that she would hardly know him.

"He didn't play with the children after he changed. The last time he came out was a week ago Saturday.

FEARED 'TROUBLE.'

"When my sister came back from Cape Breton, she took a room in East Cambridge, because she thought it would be better to be away from my home where 'Sandy' might come to see her. She told me she respected him highly and did not want to have any trouble with him, although she could never change her mind about not marrying him. Her heart was given to another man."

"She saw him at church at this time and by his actions she was led to fear that there might be trouble. She had come back to Boston with the intention of not staying around him, and had planned to go to Detroit, where another sister and a brother of ours live."

"However, when she came and told me finally, in November, that she was about to leave for the West, I asked her if she was going away because of 'Sandy.' She replied, 'Well, yes. I think it's just as well that I get away from Boston.'"

RETURNED GIFTS.

Mrs. Carmichael told of Buchanan returning the gifts Jessie had given him, and her story as to this feature her additional mystery to the statement made by Mrs. Mary O'Leary, Buchanan's landlady at 177 Brookline street, looking house, in the effect that she had dispatched the packages herself by express when Buchanan returned his gifts to his sweetheart. Mrs. O'Leary insists that she is positive she knew her lodger's sweetheart, as Muriel or Marie, and that the last name was not McKenzie.

According to Mrs. O'Leary, she gave the express man the package, a small trunk, which was addressed to Muriel or Marie in Jamaica Plain.

Mrs. Carmichael, who lives in Jamaica Plain, says there is nobody by that name in her home and adds that Buchanan personally returned Jessie's gifts. Jessie's presents from him were returned by one of her sisters.

"He kept coming to see me occasionally, and would ask about Jessie. Ever hear from Jessie?" would be said, and I would tell him "Yes." He never talked about her any more after that. But he seemed quite cheerful, especially after Christmas time, when he told me of his sick leave. I wrote to Jessie then that he

GIORGIO, GETS EVIDENCE.

Further evidence to be used as the basis of a motion for a new trial for Chapman was secured by Judge Frederick J. Gould, Chapman's senior counsel, over the telephone from New York.

It is in the form of testimony of a New York man, who swore that he saw Chapman on the way to Brooklyn the Saturday evening before the New Britain crime, and statements from barbers in a certain barber shop near Springfield, who swear that Chapman was in their place of business that Saturday afternoon subsequent to the time when, according to Walter B. Shaw, Chapman and Alvin Karpis had started on an automobile ride which ended with the slay murder.

"The evidence has begun," said State's Attorney Hugh H. Aldrich, who prosecuted Chapman, when told today of the $25,000 Stevensonville garage fire which police lay to Chapman's associates.

Nathan O. Freedman, junior counsel for Chapman, said he could not see what aim Chapman's tale could have in starting the blaze. He said it would be just as reasonable to suspect "some of Chapman's many sympathizers."

A Boston woman's letter was the most effective of those received today by the convicted man's counsel, she remarked that a basket of fruit be carried to him and the bill mailed to her.

The letter expressed the deepest admiration for the best side of the "sinner" and indicated that the writer had more than a passing interest in him. To deliver it, that she had no doubt but that if fate ordained that they could go through life together his life would be a far happier one.

It is in the form of testimony of a New York man, who swore that he saw Chapman on the way to Brooklyn the Saturday evening before the New Britain crime, and statements from barbers in a certain barber shop near Springfield, who swear that Chapman was in their place of business that Saturday afternoon subsequent to the time when, according to Walter B. Shaw, Chapman and Alvin Karpis had started on an automobile ride which ended with the slay murder.

"The evidence has begun," said State's Attorney Hugh H. Aldrich, who prosecuted Chapman, when told today of the $25,000 Stevensonville garage fire which police lay to Chapman's associates.

Nathan O. Freedman, junior counsel for Chapman, said he could not see what aim Chapman's tale could have in starting the blaze. He said it would be just as reasonable to suspect "some of Chapman's many sympathizers."

Puts Chapman in Brooklyn Night Skelly Was Killed

New York, April 7 (U.S.A.)—The life of Gerald Chapman by an ironic turn of fate, may be saved by one of the arch bandits' sworn enemies—a Brooklyn policeman.

The policeman is John McCormack, of the Snyder avenue station, and preparations were made today for Chapman's counsel to obtain his sworn testimony in support of the prisoner's alibi as the chief element in his forthcoming appeal.

According to John J. Weiss, associated with Frederick Gould, chief counsel for the doctored bandit, McCormack saw Chapman in a cigar store on Albany avenue, in Brooklyn, on the night of October 11. State witnesses at the trial at Hartford had testified Chapman was at the Old Colony Inn at Meriden, Ct., 15 miles from New Britain, where the murder of Policeman James Skelly occurred.

The shop is owned by Leon Chartrain, who, police say, was a prisoner at Alcatraz at the time Chapman was in the institution. Chartrain knew McCormack was a policeman. Weiss said, and warned Chapman to hide in a rear room. However before the policeman had recognized him, the slay murder had occurred.

"Make us a toilet soap as delicious for personal use as French soap"

— women wrote us

"DO, do make us an exquisite soap to use all the time—one as heavenly, as delicious, as French soap," they begged us.

"Please, make us a soap as magical, as different, as Lux."

So we have made Lux Toilet Form!

A true "savon de toilette"—firm, satiny, delicately fragrant! Made it by the very method beauty-wise France uses for her finest toilet soaps. Lux Toilet Form is so fine-textured, so silken smooth. It wears and wears like the imported soaps you have loved.

Satiny, caressing lather the moment you touch it to water! Lux Toilet Form leaves your skin with that delicious, indescribably exquisite feeling you loved after imported soaps—that same luxurious, fragrant feeling you used to recklessly pay those absurd imported-soap prices for!

In its charming lavender and white wrapper you will find Lux Toilet Form at your druggist's, department store or grocer's. Ask for Lux Toilet Form today. 10c. Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Massachusetts.

Spring Fashions 1925

Brilliant Colors Play a Leading Part in Modern Apparel of Eve's Daughters

THE YEAR'S AT THE SPRING, the time when all nature seems to feel the stir of a new life and begins to array herself in her gayest colors.

And because mankind responds so quickly to the varying moods of nature he begins at once to look around for new clothes or a new car or else he brings out the fishing tackle and tears the curtains practising his cast. The golf clubs also emerge, and as if by magic, garden tools and seed catalogues appear to lure the garden lover to the loam.

Womankind is just a little different. She looks first for a new hat. Everything else can wait, but the coming of the Spring brings visions of a hat. Then a dress, or a coat, and finally she is deep in the mysterious business of shopping.

Of all years surely there never was a time when color played such an important part in the fashion world.

At one time conservative shades, solid colors and similarity of design made it difficult for many women to be becomingly dressed and still be in style.

That day has passed.

Coloring riotous and abundant in every imaginable combination gives limitless opportunity to bring out every fine and striking feature of matron or maid.

When choosing a gown or suit the color is the first thing to be considered. If that is wrong, everything is wrong.

Notice the color of your eyes. If they are blue or grey, one of the many shades of blue should serve to accent their beauty. And blue is one of the most favored of fashion's colors this season.

For the girl who can wear green there are some of the most luscious shades imaginable, among which is a beautiful Chartreuse, which, strange to say, finds itself in combination not only with yellow but with a bright pink.

Yet this is not so strange, because red is the complementary color to green, and in a Chartreuse the red would be near to the brilliant pink with which it was combined.

For the reason that green contains red, pale complexioned women can usually wear green and look well, since the red, though it cannot be seen, strikes through the other color and casts a faint glow upward.

The flowered kirtle of a by-gone day has inspired the modern maker of fabrics to devise alluring figures and stamp them on French chiffon, a material of such fairy-like loveliness and delicate weave that even the fairies must envy mortal woman her chiffon cloud of loveliness.

Lace has never lost its charm. It is wonderful what a little lace frill will do in the way of adding an illusive charm.

Gobweb in fineness yet strong is a silver lace which is used to trim many of the evening gowns. A gold thread, running through it, catches the light and holds it in little gleamy points, like jewels. For the young girl nothing is so suitable as lace for trimming or for a whole gown and it is equally becoming on the older woman. All lace frocks are taking their place among those intended for evening wear. Heavy cream is becoming to nearly every type of beauty and these frocks are generally made on straight lines with godets of fine net at the bottom.

Shimmering Duchesse satins in the most exquisite colorings, and shot taffetas which change, chameleon like, with every move, are fashioned into gowns designed with such art that makes a picture of every one.

Scarves of chiffon and crepe in all colors are arrayed for the finishing touch to the costume. Dainty shell pinks which give a flattering softness to the outline of head and shoulders are beloved of women who know just what can be done with that little bit of fluff.

It's the woman's season and every daughter of Eve loves it and makes the most of it and surely never in the world has she had such a wealth of beauty with which to adorn her person.

It is still the thing to have one's monogram on one's pocket—the powers that be in the Fashion World have decreed. One trig little frock seen the other day in the Easter Fashion Show—fashioned of slate-blue linen, and belted trimly about the waistline—was relieved in its simplicity only by a monogram of bright silk on the blouse pocket.

White linen collars and short-sleeved cuffs made up the rest of the costume design. Forty-inch material, requiring 3½ yards for size 16 to 20 years, was used.

Little red shoes are coming back, they say. Not only red, but blue and green and other delightful colors in which dainty maidens will dance until three o'clock in the morning.

The vogue of white satin for evening wear is increasing and is taking the place, to a large extent, of gold and silver brocade. Blonde satin, which looked like the biggest thing in several seasons, is being replaced by blonde kid, due, perhaps, to the fact that so many cheap shoes in the blonde satin were flooding the market.

Boston's Stores Are Offering Better Bargains Than Can Be Found Elsewhere

THE FLOWERS THAT BLOOM in the Spring, and perhaps even Solomon in all his glory, couldn't be more gloriously colored than the apparel that is to grace femininity this season.

Way back to grandmother and great-grandmother one can trace the lines and designs of many of the frocks.

Phyllis and Corydon and the Dresden Shepherdesses who pose so sedately on Great Aunt's china vases and Grandmother's tapestry are not so far removed from the maid of today who wears a silken gown of like pattern, lace and flower trimmed, breathing a quaint old world atmosphere.

When Elizabeth was queen in England she wore a ruff of stiff material edged with lace which stood up nearly to the top of her head in the back. Her gown had a tight fitting waist with bone inside to keep it snug, and the skirt, which was very full, was usually made of heavy brocade silk.

Today the ruff is a frill of fine lace, the waist is fitted but has no bone, and the skirt, though full, is quite short, sometimes very short, and is made in materials which could easily be pulled through the ring in the Arabian Nights.

Peasantry of all countries have contributed to the costume of the woman of the New World. For a while only houses were made in peasant style, but little suggestions have crept into the gowns and one sees a sober, black satin frock brightened because half way down the sleeve the full whiteness, embroidered in brilliant silks, breaks forth.

But it is in the sport frocks that the greatest change has come.

When the huntsman's horn sounded Milady rode to the chase attired in velvet. Long coat, long skirt, with a train that almost swept the ground even when she was mounted—and she sat sideways on her horse.

Nowadays she goes like her brother. Smart cord breeches, little coat, cream flannel vest, tailored shirt, snappy tie, and she rides astride her hunter.

In other seasons much has been said calling attention to the wonderful clothes to be bought in Paris, and American women sent their money to Europe. Then New York began to take notice and designers there learned to make gowns that would not disgrace Chanel, Poiret, or any of the great dress-makers, and American women were encouraged to buy in New York.

Now, even that is no longer necessary, at least for Boston women.

In Boston shops can be found direct Paris importations. New York copies of Paris models, original New York creations, and, in some instances, gowns made exclusively for Boston shops.

So, when Boston's women fare forth to purchase the Spring wardrobe they might remember that if they patronize local shops they help to keep their city prosperous—and really, the clothes are more beautiful and prices far more moderate than if bought direct from New York.

Before you go outside, look around you and see what the shops in your own home town have to offer.

CHANDLER HAS ATTRACTIVE HAT LINES

Close-Fitting Milan Shape is the Season's Leader in Popularity

Wear of all shapes and colors, including the season's popular picture derby.

hat, are being displayed in a particularly attractive line by Chandler & Company.

Although most graceful and beautiful hats are shown, the majority seem to be variations of the picture derby.

One of the most attractive of this season's styles is the close fitting shape of Milan combined with small banding on top a spray of small feathers and a flat gloaming finish on the side.

Many of the hats are such clever copies of Paris creations that they defy detection.

STUNNING HAT OF SATIN AND MILAN

Chandler is showing a stunning combination of satin and Milan headgear, trimmed with an unusually striking feather design.

SHOES NEED TO MATCH ALL COSTUMES

Thayer MacNeil is Showing Beautiful Up-to-the-Minute Designs

In order to be well dressed a woman must be well shod. No other one thing matters so much. This season brought a surprise in the shoe world. However, which in the early part of the year threatened to be extremely high, suddenly dropped to a medium and low place.

In place of last year's straight and narrow "lacey" designs, came a chaste simplicity. Tan and shades of brown are still holding firm, and shades of all styles with a first percentage of one strap shoe are the favorite.

A beautifully fitted pump of tan leather with military heel and a short tongue as its only decoration is a Thayer MacNeil shoe which is sure to be popular for street wear.

Thayer MacNeil also displays an ideal shoe for afternoon wear in a simple satin of chaste design.

In the field of sports wear a novel ty shoe of dresden comes in pale colors to match an costume. The military heel is practical and a black tongue for contrast adds the finishing touch. Crepe-soled shoes continue to be in demand.

Purposeness in choosing shoes is the fact that they must match "a costume or at least harmonize with it." This makes it necessary to have shoes for every gown or at least have them taken to buy shoes that will go with everything.

The matter of getting the correct size is just as necessary as the right shoe and makes all the difference in the world in the appearance as well as in the comfort of the shoe.

street, Cambridge, posed for the accompanying picture.

MANNISH COLLAR VOGUE FOR TAILORED DRESSES

Collars are an important factor in imparting that chic appearance to the frock, we say. The jumper frock, which is outstanding in sports wear, features the club collar and the roll or turnover collar, which may be buttoned all the way up or worn in a V. High neck lines are given prominence in sport and semi-tailored costumes. The mannish collar is such in vogue in tailored dresses and coats.

BODICE SKIRT AND TUNIC BLOUSE PRETT

An attractive ladies' and misses' bodice skirt and tunic blouse is being shown. The blouse is designed for sixteen to twenty years, a thirty-four to forty-four bust. The skirt is designed for fourteen to twenty years with thirty-four to forty-four bust. The costume, six inches, requires one and five-eighths yards of fifty-four-inch material, and one-quarter yard of thirty-six crepe de chine for trimmings. One and seven-eighths yards of thirty-six crepe de chine for bodice skirt and lower section of blouse. The tunic is shown for the lower edge.

Polka Dot Silk In Fashion's Spotlight

Polka dot silks are very much in Fashion's spotlight, and embody creations of slim models that are tremendously popular.

One of the most sought for effects to be obtained with the embroidered fabric effect, the jabot of plain white silk contrasting with red and white polka dots, and hanging from the neck item at the side.

Low neck and shawl shoulders complete the effect, with a line of red tape giving a casual effect.

NEW SPRING COATS ARE CUT ON SMART LINES

One of the spring features is the new ladies' coat, designed for a 24 to 48 bust. The width at the lower edge is about two and three-eighths yards. Every line of the smart coat, which is lined with crepe-de-chine, is chic. The three intriguing features of the mode are embodied in it. The side righth sleeve, long waist collar and three-piece circular flounce. The front of the coat is gathered on the shoulders, producing desirable fulness.

'SUMMER FURS' AN IMPORTANT INCIDENTAL

Houghton & Dutton Showing
Variety to Please All
Tastes and Purposes

It is surprising to find that the time when the first fur coat is a hard new coat and the second the first fur coat is a hard new coat.

And femininity is no longer incidentally added to what she can find to make herself lovely with the coat of creation.

Never before has there been so much. In fact, the only fashion now is what thing shall she buy.

There are lace and silk, and satin and crepe. There are fluff and feathers, and there are green and blue, and yellow and red, all in the same place of material or in different ones as strikes the feminine fancy.

FRILLS GALORE.
There are straight lines and frills and frills and frills, and who would have thought that the long frilled coat would bob up so soon.

There is the Spanish dress which has never quite disappeared, and there are summer furs, both of which from important incidents in the woman's wardrobe, and there is a recent combination of fur and cloth, or of crepe that is going to be a big favorite.

Nowadays there is no need to go outside one's door to get virtually the entire wardrobe. Seen in the Houghton & Dutton style shop were some fashions of coat and wrap for the smart woman and in addition, dainty accessories that are dear to the heart of the dainty maid.

NOT EXPENSIVE.
With all the beauty of the new Spring fashions there is one saving thought. They are not as expensive on the whole as in past seasons.

Even the fashions are surprising. In consideration and true can see some of the famous French models that

FOUR RECKLESS GIRLS

Here are four girls . . . Yesterday they were joyous, care-free, looking at life as a beautiful adventure . . . Now . . .

The Flask . . . The Midnight Car . . . The Secluded Roadhouse . . . When will Girls learn that these are just Stacked Cards in the Game of Life?

Reckless Girl No. 1

AT THE "Windmill" Roadhouse, almost in the shadow of the Capital, where "the lid is off," lovely Laurel Dunton, the fastest flying Virginian that ever tried to exceed Washington's mad pace, now wild with young longing, mad with young love, tries to kill herself. What brought this dark finale to her "Gorgeous Fling?"

Reckless Girl No. 2

THELMA, young, beautiful, ardent for life and romance, spends her last cent at a glittering bathing beach. As half-past eleven Dick Randall tempts her to ride home in his luxurious car along a road of sinistral resorts. The moonlight way seems to the girl an enchanted trail . . . Later, her mother cries: "Why did you do it, Thelma? They brought you here . . . You reeked with liquor. You were in such a condition you didn't know me." What happened? Why is she now "The Girl Nobody Believed?"

Reckless Girl No. 3

FAY REYNOLDS, "The Honky-Tonk Kid", plays the violin sublimely. Something in her heredity sends her, not to fine salons, but to low dance-halls. Descendant of a proud, slave-owning family, she seems to be the last girl on earth to accuse of such a thing and yet how can her one defender free her from the charge of—miscegenation?

Reckless Girl No. 4

FOR YEARS, attractive but lonely, she worked in a department store and lived in a hall - bedroom. Hungry for love and companionship, she answered a letter in a newspaper column from a man who desired a girl's love.

She dreamed it meant marriage, but when she went to the lonely, far-off rendezvous, what penalty did life try to make her pay for her "Short Cut to Love?"

These, and twenty more vital true stories appear in May SMART SET—awaiting you at the nearest news-stand.

SECRETS OF HEALTH
 By Charles A. J. Reed, M. D.
 Former President of the American Medical Association

Secrets of health are not secrets at all. They are facts that are known to all, but are not acted upon. The secrets of health are: 1. To eat right. 2. To drink right. 3. To sleep right. 4. To exercise right. 5. To keep the mind right.

"Definitely," wrote Wilcox of early afternoon's visit and told a few others. "I know all the differences between my two small towns as well as I could if ever I'll go to the other side of the Atlantic. I'd paid more and had more, or if I gave more having. The way of my health broke down and I came here to live with my mother. I've got to get used to it. But I've felt that way since I was born."

I understood it took much more than back stage.

"I'm a deeper understanding," Lucy," he drew her into his arms "such as exist between you and me."
